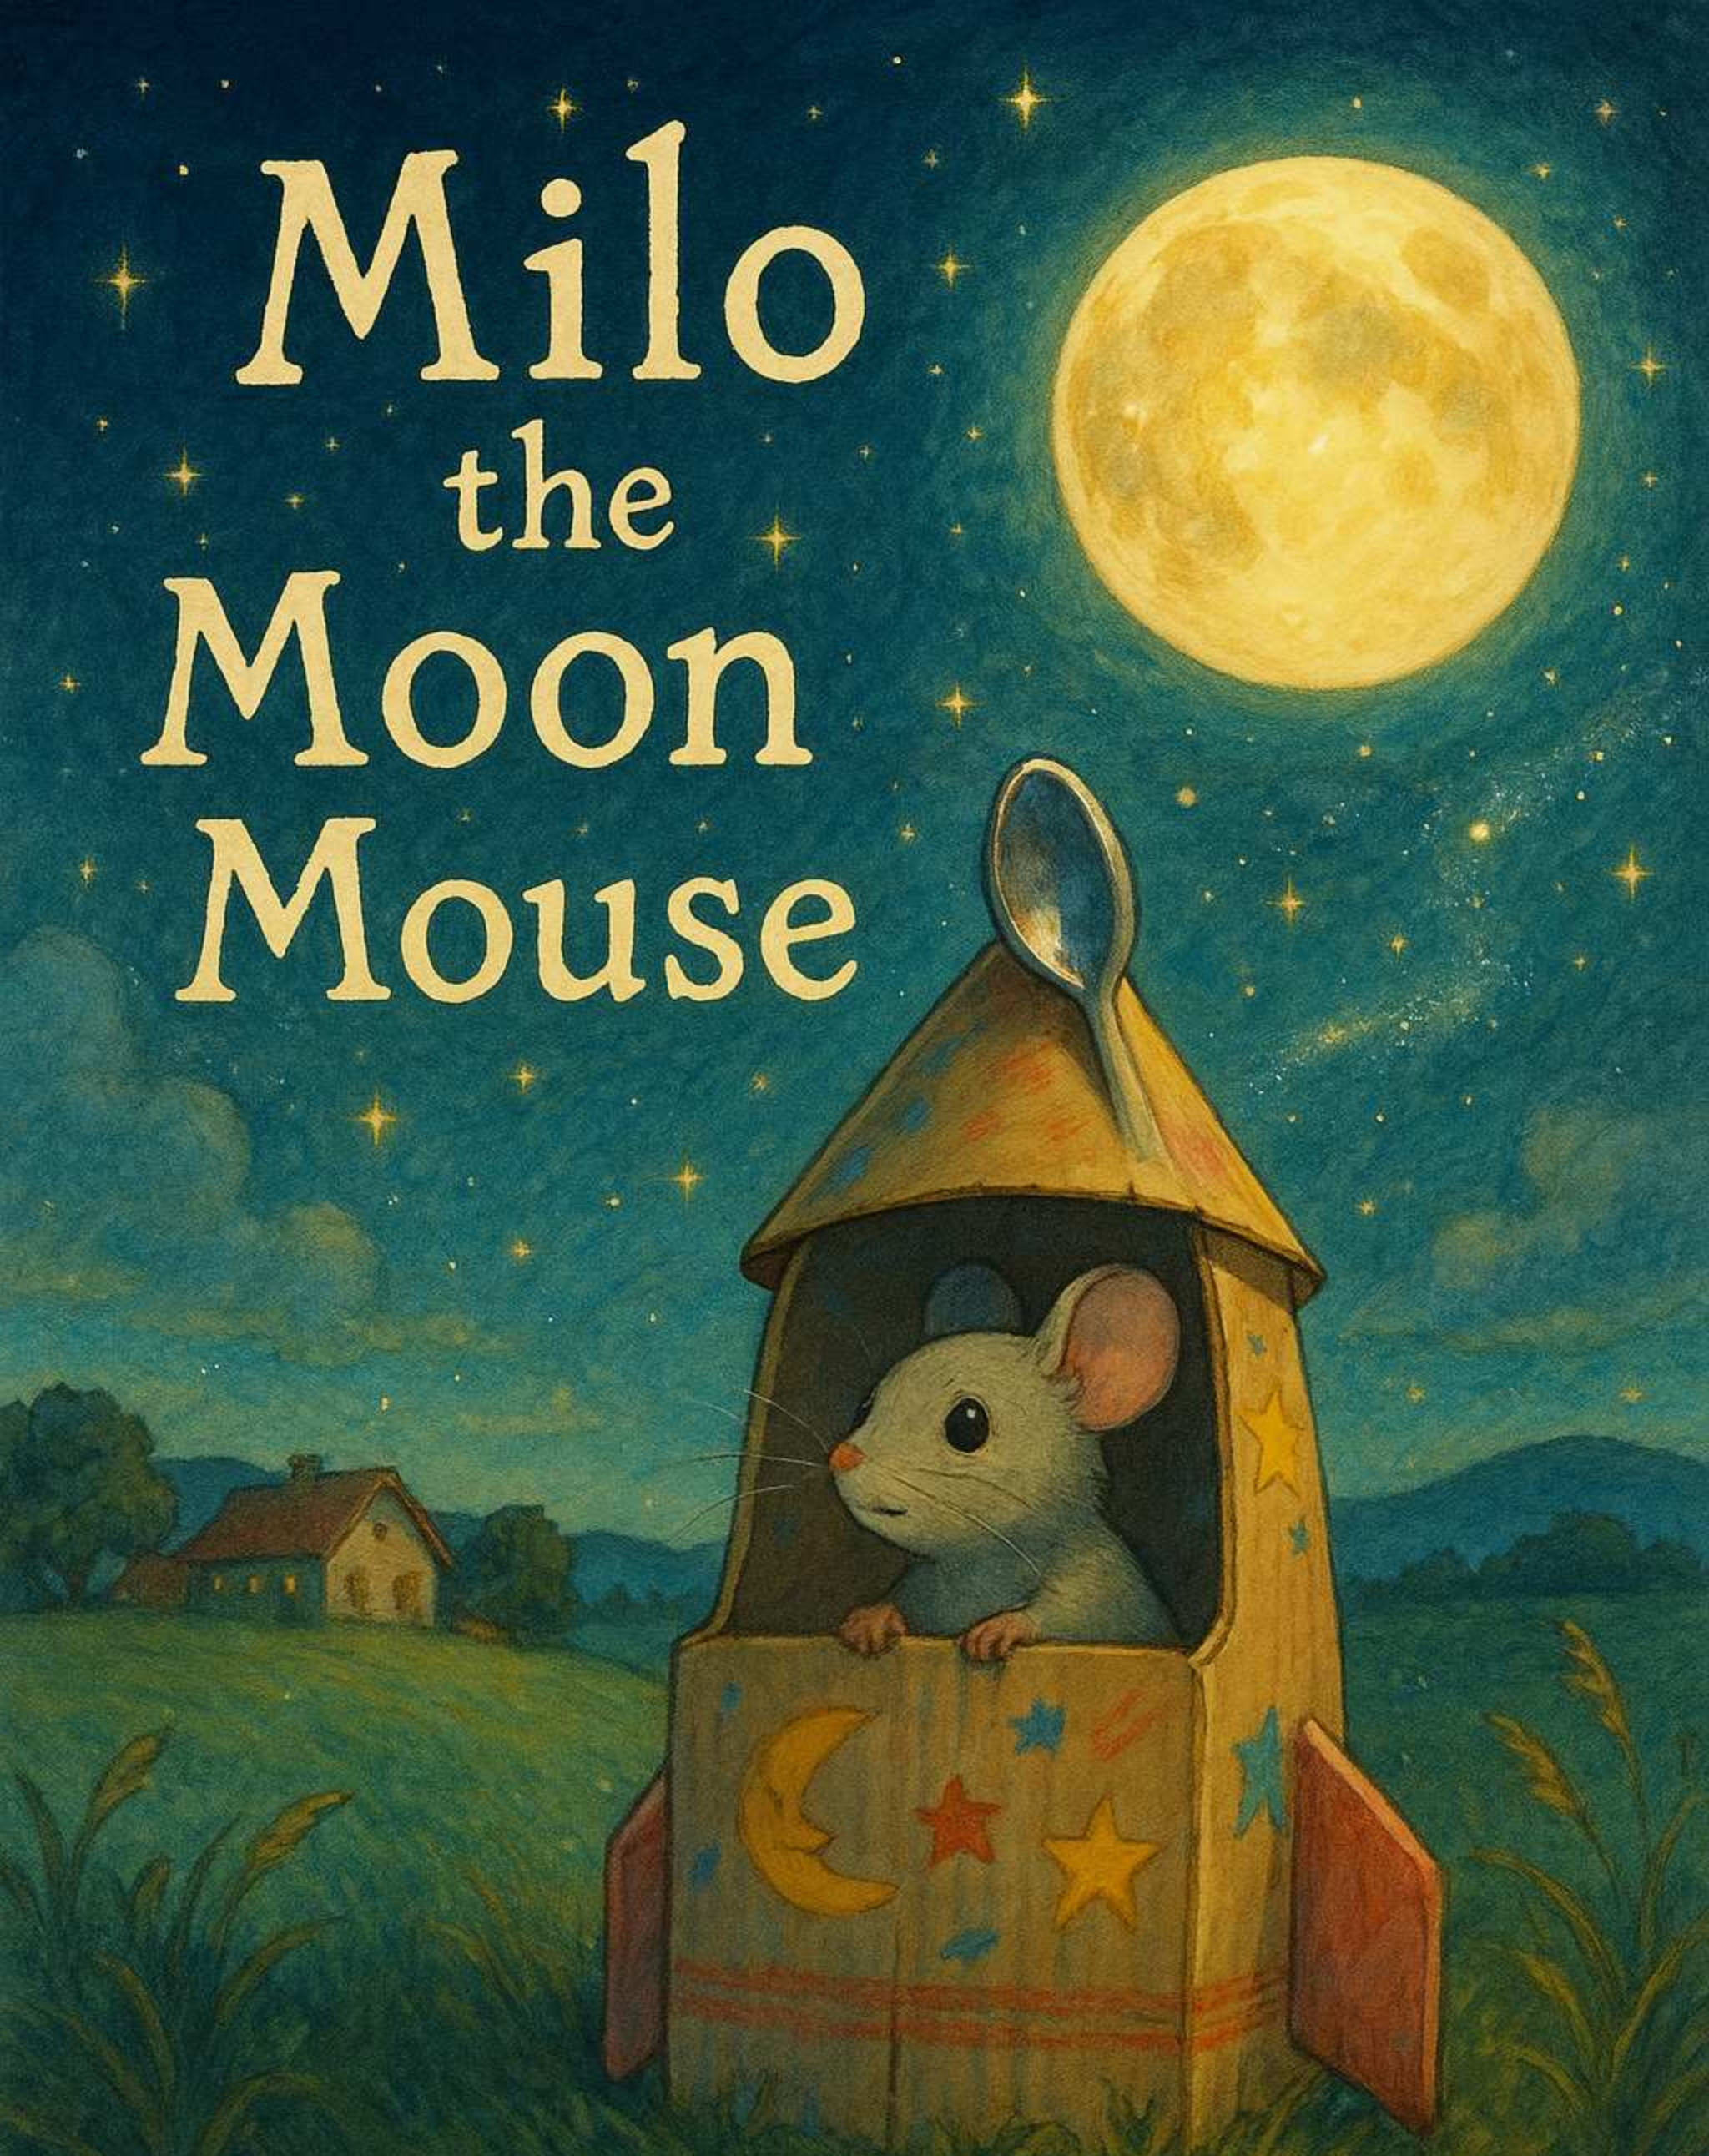
Milo the Moon Mouse



Written by Priyambada Pandey

A bedtime adventure among the stars

Once upon a time, in a cozy little hole on a quiet farm, lived a curious mouse named Milo.

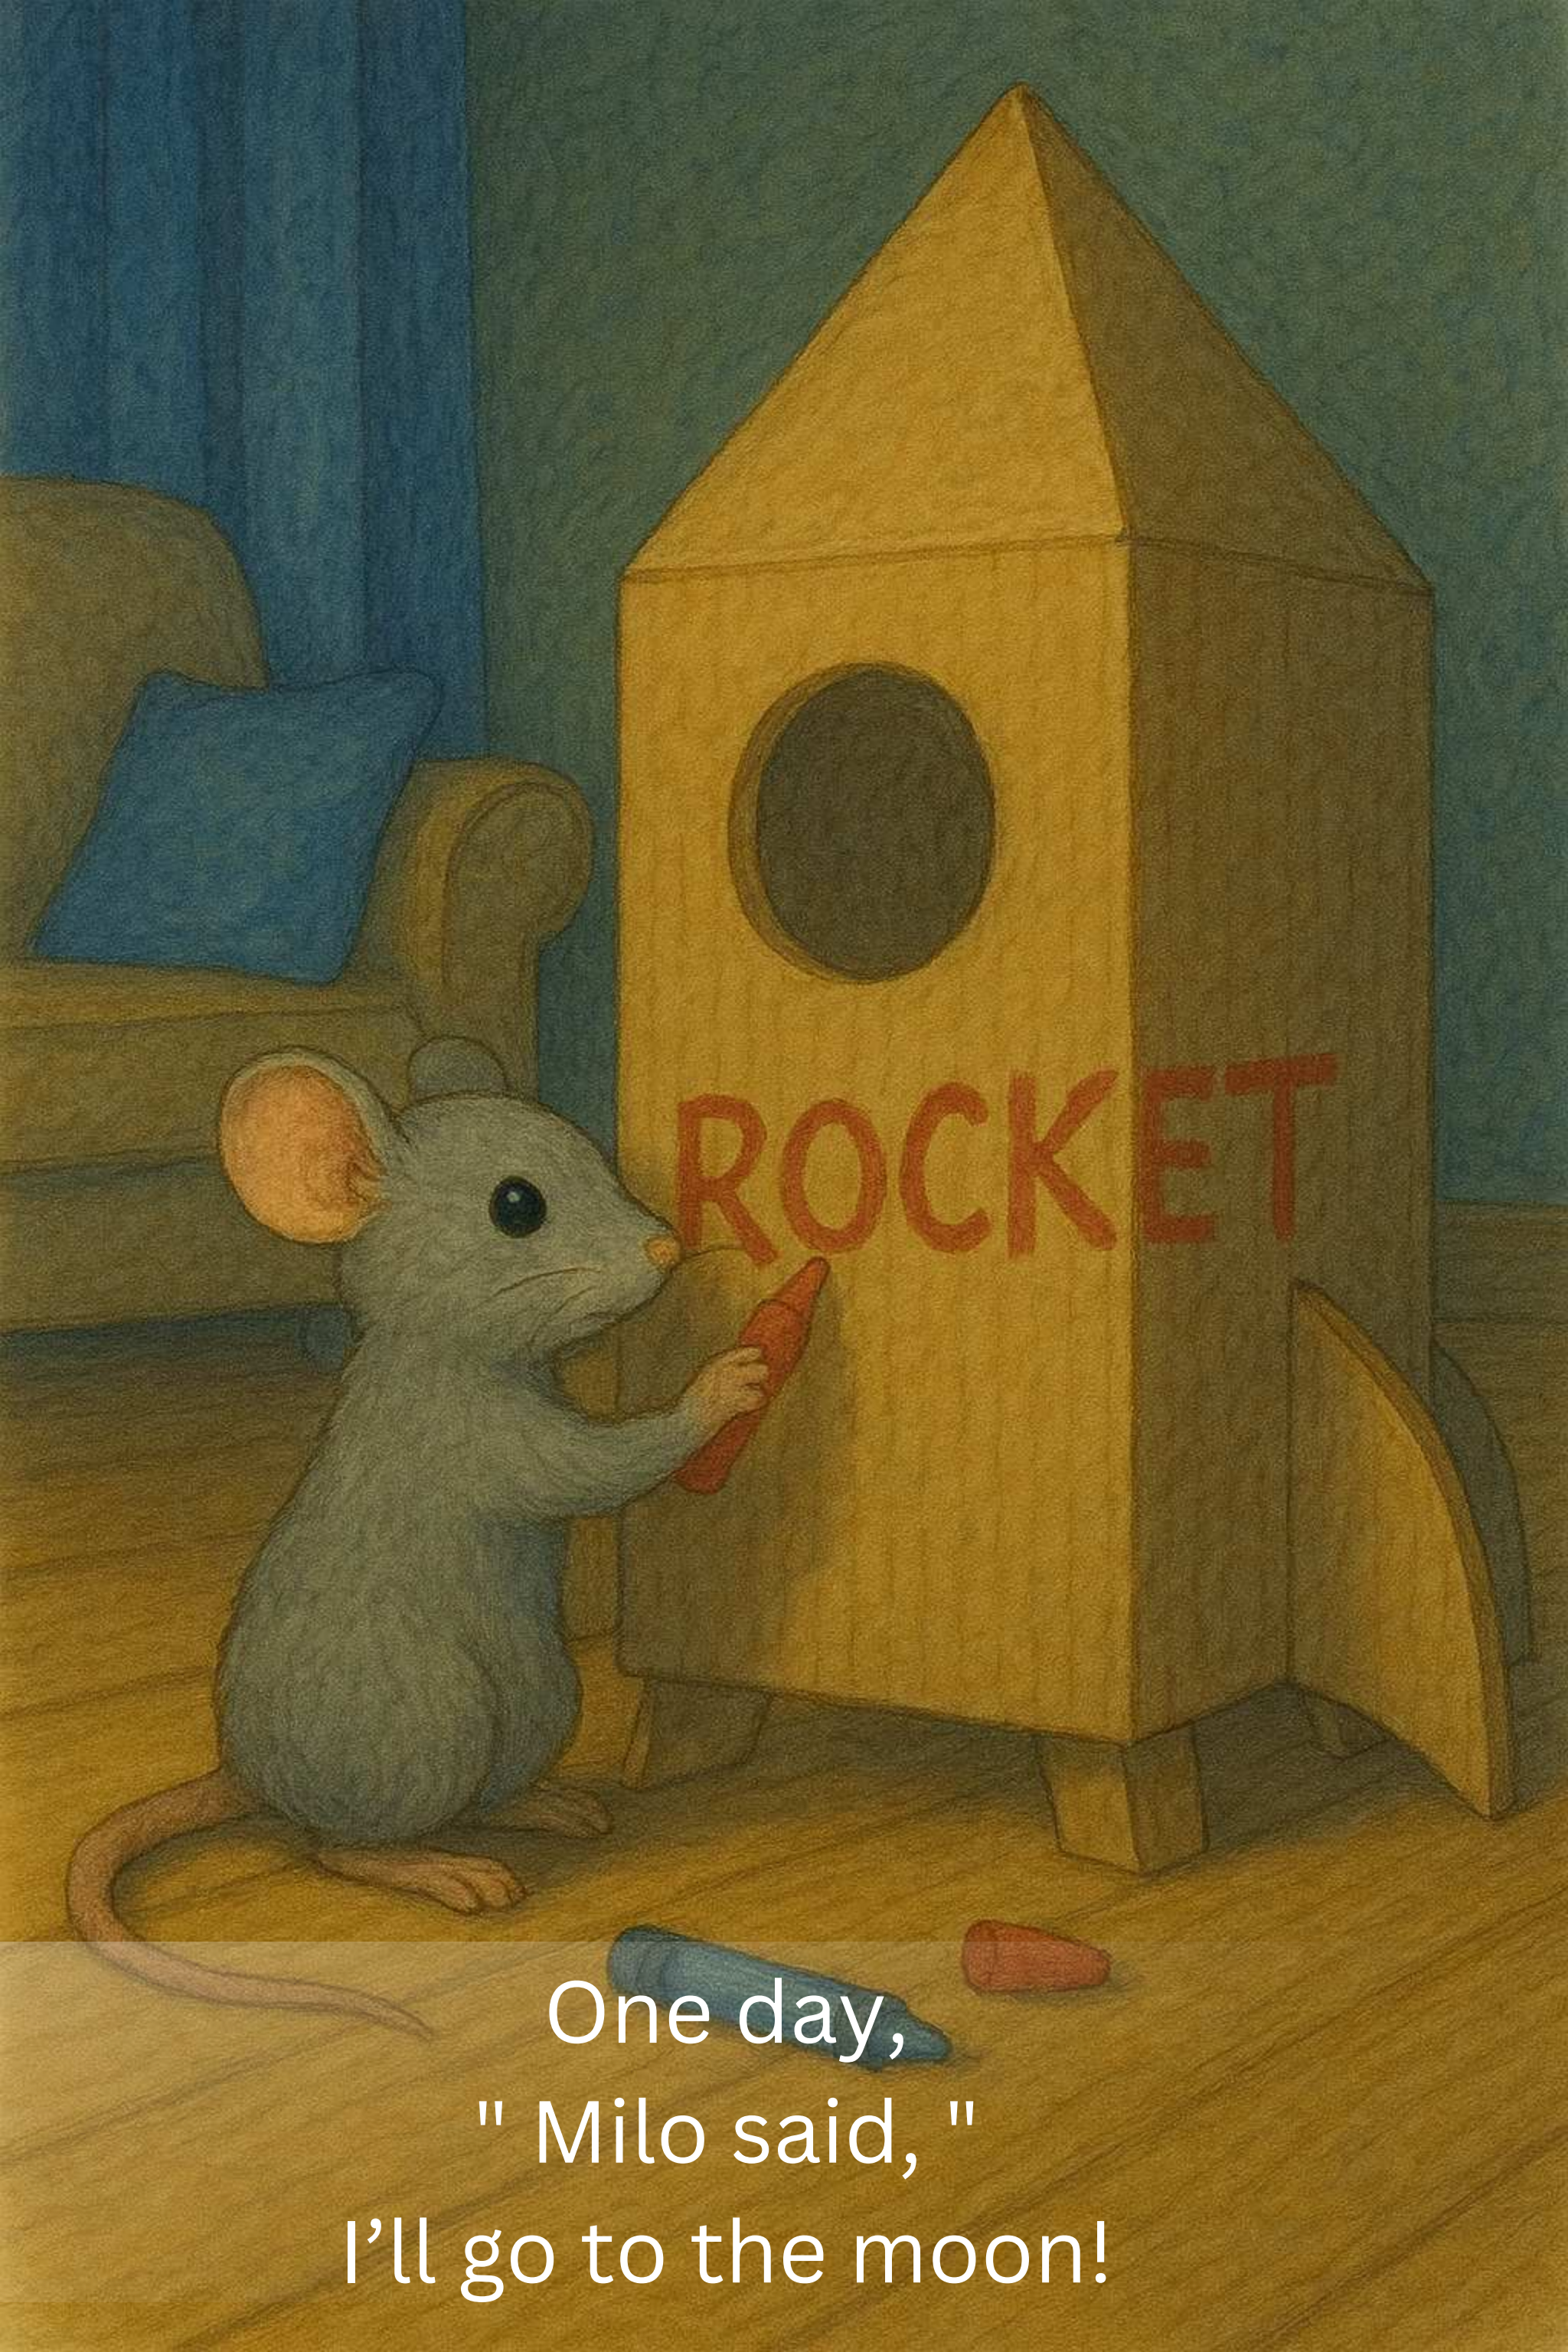
Milo wasn’t like the other mice. He didn’t care much for cheese or chasing crumbs. Milo dreamed of the stars.



One day,
" Milo said, "
I’ll go to the moon!

The barn animals giggled.😂

“Mice don’t go to the moon,” said Penny the Pig.

But Milo was not discouraged.

He built a rocket ship out of cardboard, string, and a shiny spoon.

He packed a snack (just in case): a cracker, a peanut, and a tiny thermos of tea.

“Three… Two… One… Blast off!” Milo shouted, as he jumped into his rocket.

Of course, the rocket didn’t really fly, but something magical happened…

Milo dreamed he soared past stars, waved at astronauts, and bounced on the moon like a trampoline.

When he woke up, Milo smiled. “Maybe I didn’t go to the moon… but I went far in my imagination!”

And from that day on, all the animals stopped laughing. Instead, they started dreaming, too.

Because sometimes the biggest journeys begin with the tiniest dreams.

About the Author

Priyambada Pandey is a dreamer, storyteller, and lover of all things whimsical. Inspired by wonder of childhood and the beauty of imagination, she creates stories that help little minds explore big dreams. Milo the Moon Mouse is her magical journey into the stars—and beyond.